Our Pledge as Elected and Appointed Public Servants of Seminole County and Its Seven Cities

Throughout American history moments arise for every generation that challenge Americans to seize that moment while remembering the blessings bestowed on America. The moment has arrived for this generation to acknowledge that as united people, no matter what race, ethnic background, religion or other beliefs be, we can do better understanding the need for improvement in our social justice awareness and actions. This moment is our call, a united call, against racism and prejudice in all forms while at the same time appreciating the work and dedication of the vast majority of law enforcement officers who practice and believe in justice for all and serve the needs of their fellow citizens with fairness and respect as our first responders.

Yes, history has called America once again. It is a call to respond and seize the moment to become more respectful of our fellow citizens, to continue to make America the shining city on the hill where all citizens can live free from fear and united in the belief that we are all created by a loving and merciful God.

During one historic moment in the glorious and ever-improving history of our nation, a brave group of Americans stood their ground on a bridge. By so doing, they helped build a bridge that so many crossed over on their way to equality, equity, and justice. There is more to do. As today’s elected and appointed public servants in Seminole County, Florida and its seven cities, we pledge to continue to stand for equal treatment under the law, and to fight racism and prejudice in all forms, as together, we continue to build the bridge of freedom, equality, and justice for all.
